Miss Margaret Michie, daughter of the late Gen. Robert E. Lee, U. S. A., whose engagement was recently announced to Mr. David Torrey Wells of New York, was married at Norwalk, Conn. Miss Michie has been a general favorite in social circles of Washington. Mr. Wells has recently returned from France, where he served as a captain in the air service.

Mrs. Leon Errol. Has distinction of being first ocean traveler to catch steamer by means of airplane.

Mrs. Leon Errol, known in theatrical circles as Stella Chateleine, photographed upon her arrival in New York recently aboard the liner Aquitania. Mrs. Errol has the distinction of being the first ocean traveler to have caught a liner by means of an airplane. She was stopping at Hounslow, 15 miles from London and 80 miles from Southampton, from where the Aquitania was sailing. She missed her train to Southampton after having booked passage on the Aquitania. Mrs. Errol then speeded to the Hounslow aviation field and succeeded in having an airplane placed at her disposal. She arrived at Southampton in time for the sailing of the big liner.

Samuel Gompers, with straw hat and small flag at left of large American flag, leading wet demonstration in Washington.

A giant demonstration by labor men and others was staged recently in Washington as a protest against prohibition July 1. President Samuel Gompers of the American Federation of Labor led the procession which marched to the steps of the capital. The marchers carried American flags to show their loyalty to the U. S. while making the protest.

beloved member of European royalty, coming to this country primarily to assist, has been spending the last few months in London and Paris and efforts in behalf of imperiled humanity during the late war, and plans soon to pay a visit to the United States. Queen Marie, heretofore a tireless worker for the Red Cross during the war, is her own stricken country.

American soldiers watching Juarez while guarding International bridge. American soldiers guarding the International bridge at El Paso in prospect just across the river, passed in their sally against Villa. The bridge shown is the one over which American troops, especially for trouble is always brewing or must never relax their vigilance.
